

There is a river

It flows from Pittsburgh's
Point—formed of mighty mountain
Streams—to pour a path
From cityscape's fountained prow
Past sunlighted fertile plains.

Sewickley
Academy
Yearbook
Volume XXII

This is the pathway
to the ultimate goal . . .

As tributaries converge into a mainstream seeking the mighty ocean, the individuals of the Academy merge into a body of intellectual wealth. As the ocean defines the river's purpose, the Academy stimulates our ambition. The source of the river is merely a tiny stream, tumbling haphazardly over rocks, journeying down the hillside, gathering strength and momentum as it converges with another of its kind. Engrossed in his sole existence, a child delights and exhausts himself in his play; one day establishing a friendship which ripens with age. As comrades, the new-found friends battle with the adjustment to school, an alien interloper in their play. They learn to channel their energies to a novel experience—intellectual enrichment, which quenches their thirst for knowledge. They build strength of character as they move swiftly from one grade to another, continually expanding their understanding and sharpening their abilities as they encounter new experiences through academics, activities and athletics.

A river works wonders

It forms and reforms
 Fissures, falls and stony shores;
 It makes and remakes
 Mudflats, moles, and sandy shoals,
 Then floods—and eats an island.

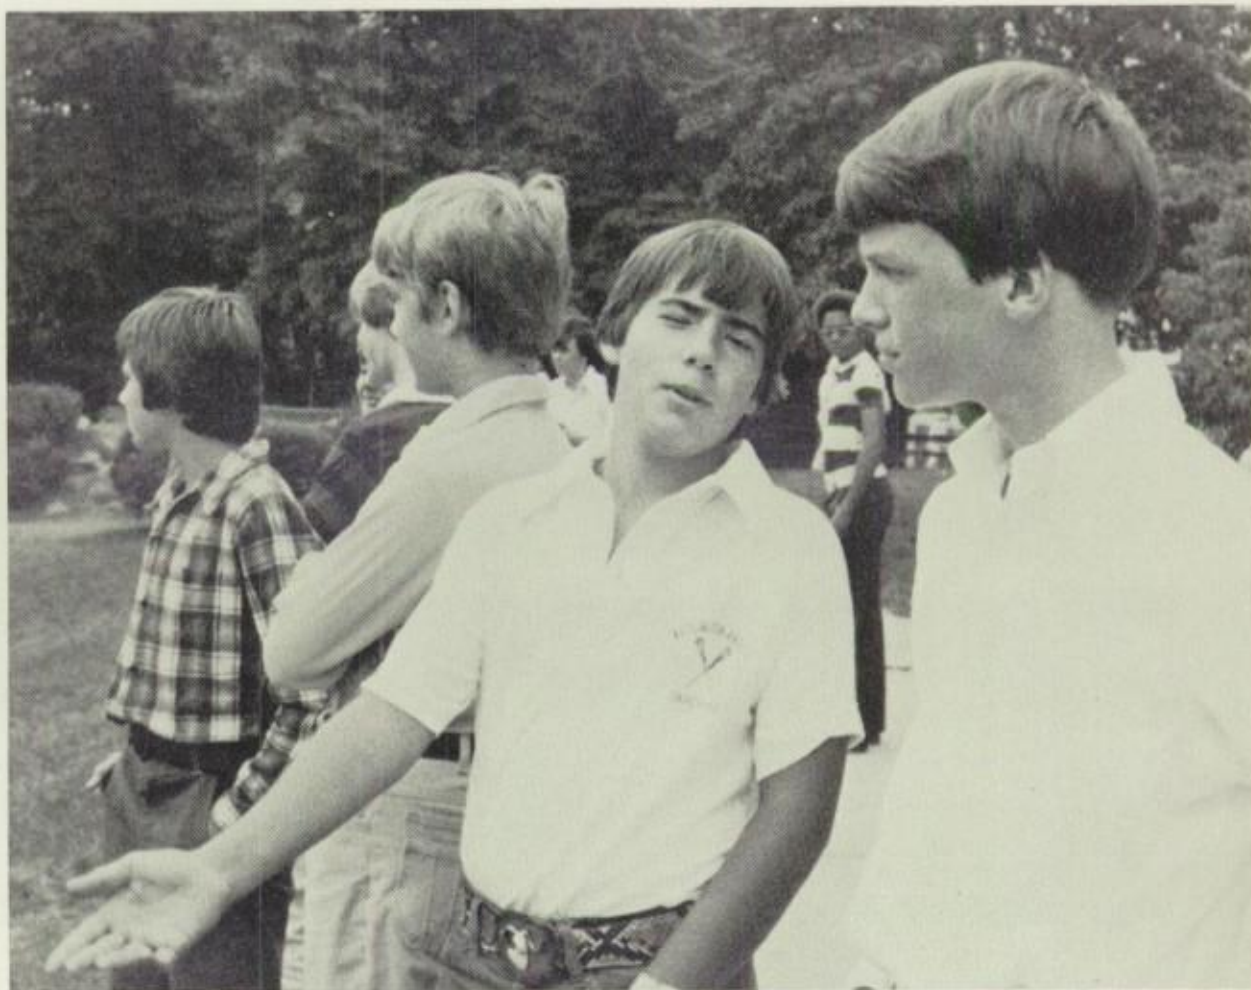

Top: Seventh graders score a goal.
Middle: John Fagen gets help from Mr. Frame, McConnell's Mill, dismissal, "Four-square"
Bottom: Chow time, Where's my ride?, Under the Fort Pitt Bridge, Clowns in the courtyard.

Top: Annie Edson swings it, "Good morning!", "Who put the frog in my locker?"; Brooke's ballet pose, "That's why we're winning."

Bottom: Catching flies?, The main reds, Welcoming party for Lower School Mothers, Ann Lawton reads Seventeen.

We work wonders too

Water flows from a hose

There is a lady

Who weaves a wondrous
Web of fairytales and yarns;
Whose whisper-world makes
Magic, spinning print into
Dreams, desires and destinies.

A master of her profession, she has, for many years, offered us a wealth of knowledge in rich surroundings—the hub of Lower and Middle Schools. But her learning is not limited to the pages of colorful library books; she has traveled widely in the United States, Europe and Russia too. She struggles successfully with State orders, A-V equipment, new editions, a green Opel, and Fisherman's knits. However, to the students she is a unique personality—concerned, helpful, dependable, entertaining—and for these obvious reasons they have chosen to dedicate the 1978 Sewickley Academy Yearbook to Mrs. Kathryn W. Kruse.

In the summer of 1977
the Academy lost good friends

Mrs. Henry Oliver Rea

Mr. Gilmore, a former member of the Board of Trustees, was instrumental in acquiring the property for the Snyder Gymnasium and the Senior School. He started the endowment fund which has raised approximately two million, three hundred thousand dollars. Mr. Henry Oliver was a strong supporter of the Academy's programs, donating money to the school for general use. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Oliver Rea donated the entire Rea Auditorium.

These friends will be memorialized not through mere stone or wood but through the hours of entertainment in the Rea Auditorium, through toils and triumphs we feel on our fields, and through the continuing academic excellence we enjoy at the Academy.

David M. Gilmore

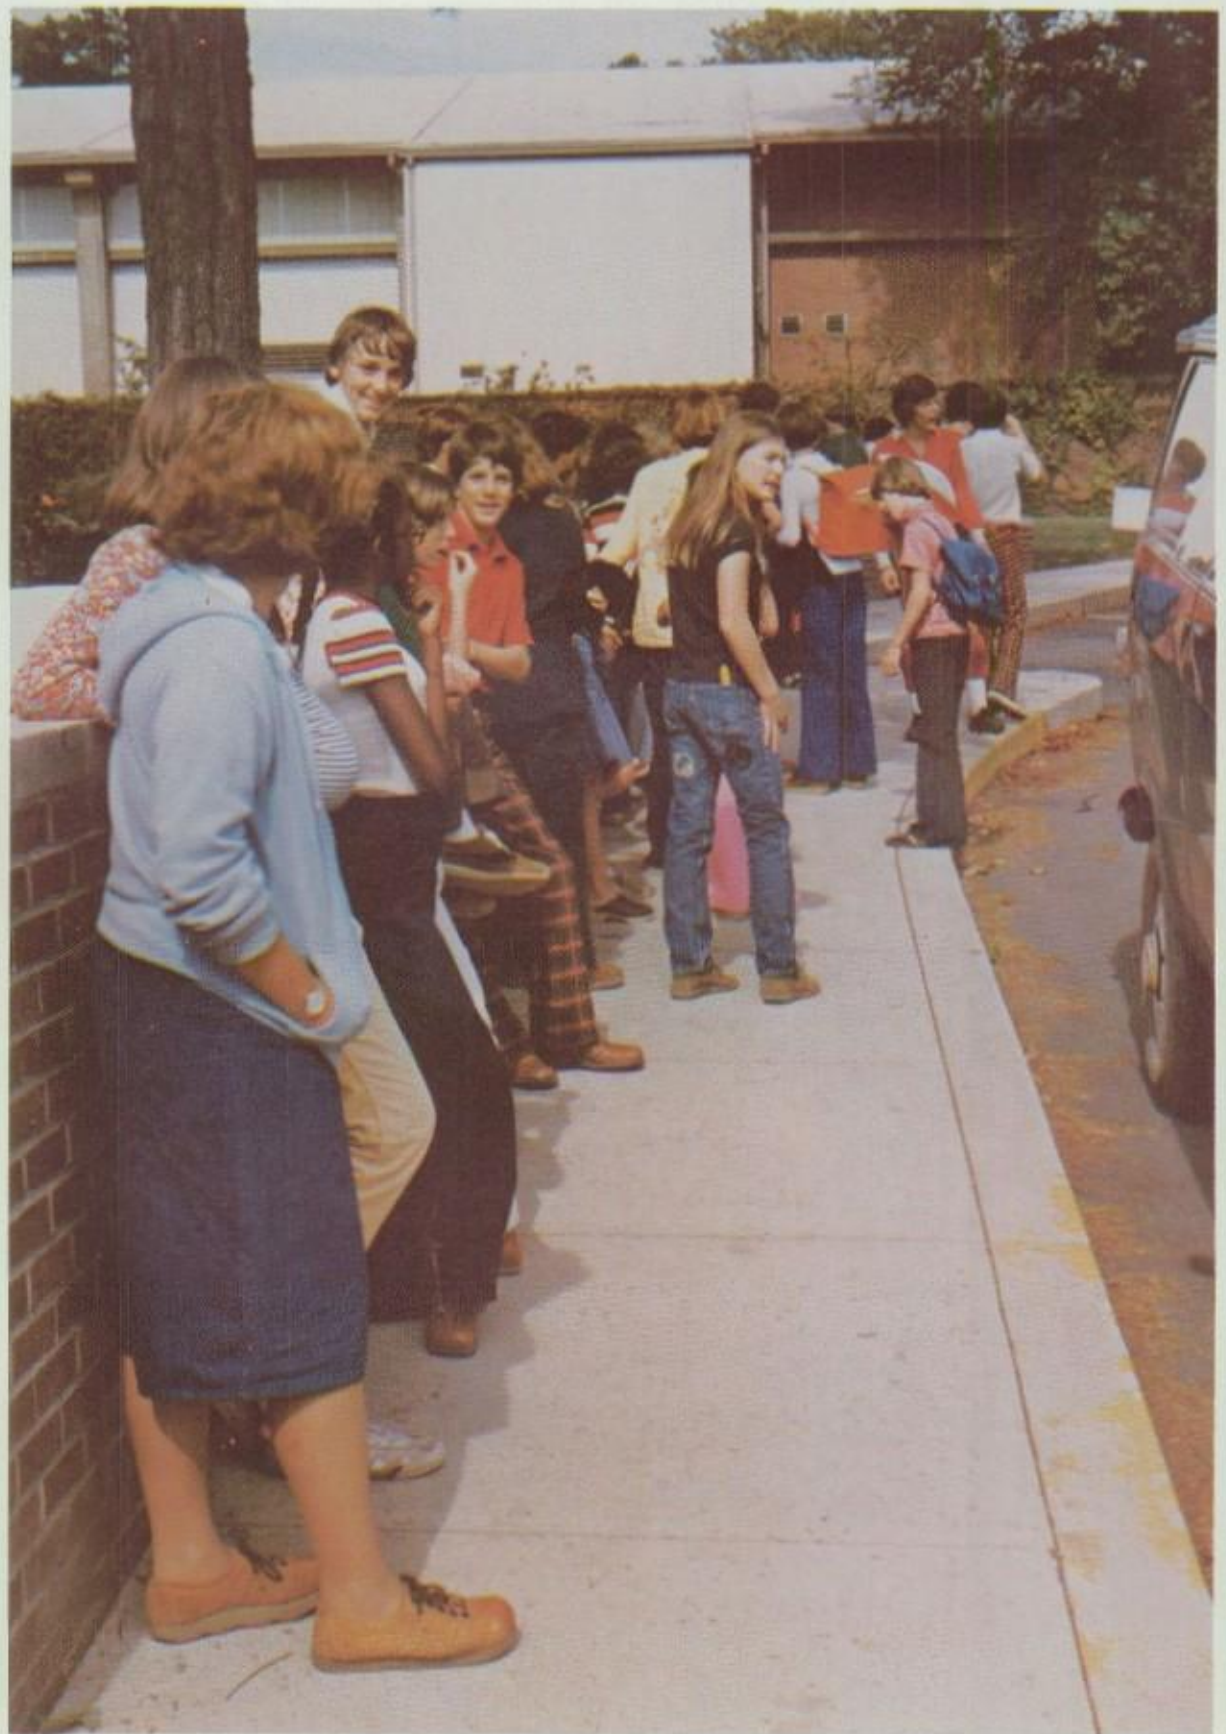

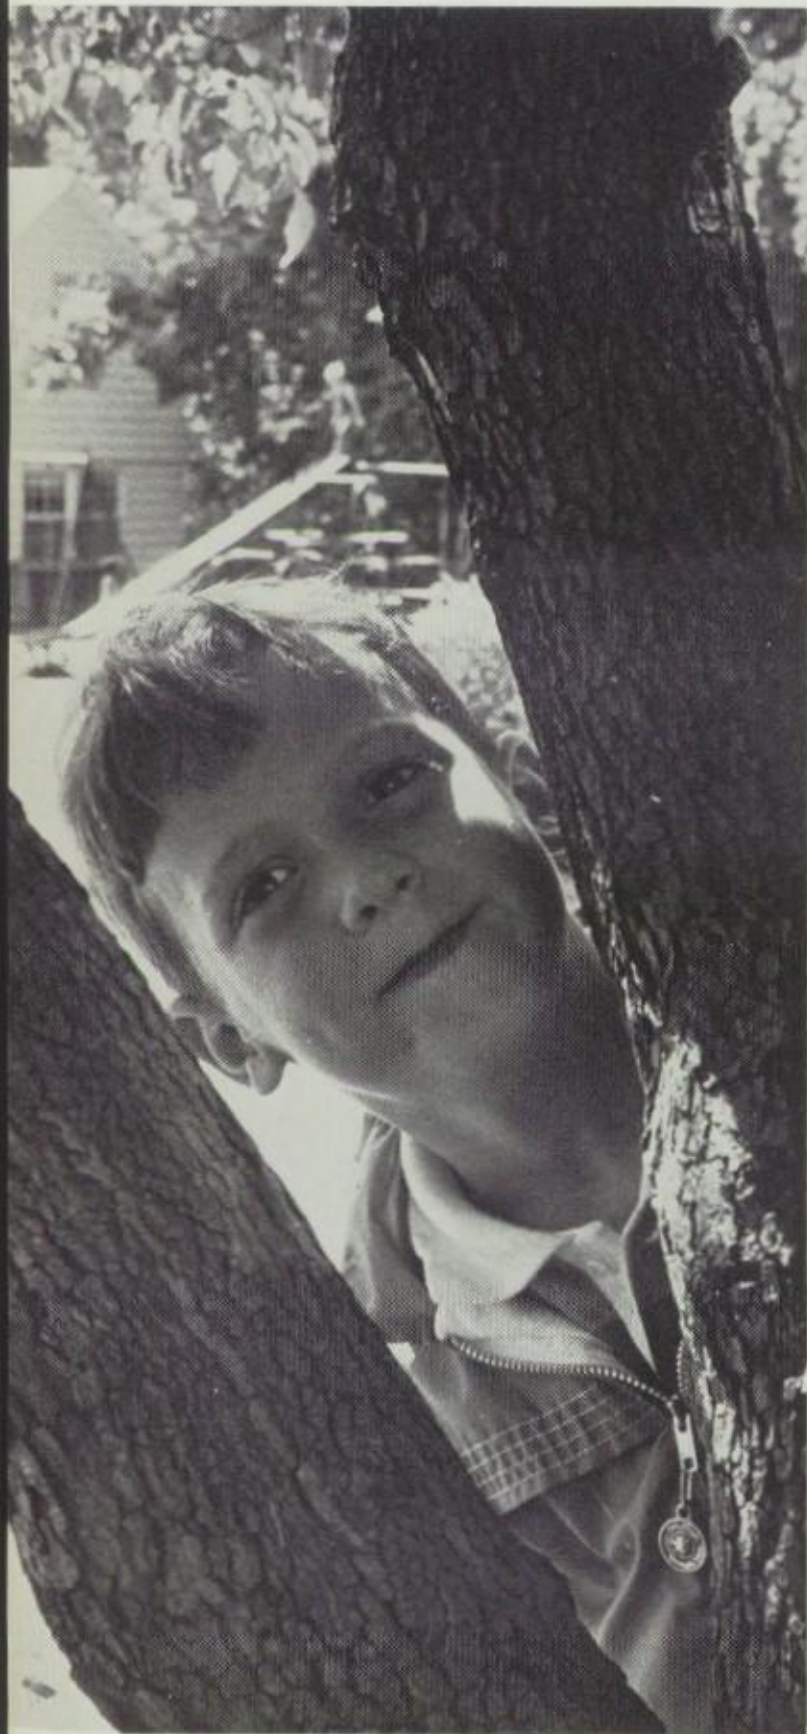

Henry Oliver, Jr.

Sources flow from springs,
From wet woods to mountain rills,
Through fields and farms to
Build brooks, become swift streams, then
Finally fuse a river.

Our laughter fills the corridors, our minds reflect newly learned concepts, our bodies respond to stimuli, our hearts expand through friendships. We are the students of Sewickley Academy who emerge from the various nooks and crannies of Pittsburgh and embark on an educational excursion. We are a ceaseless flow of intellectual power and vitality, continually growing in size, strength and usefulness. In quest of our purpose in life, we resemble the river which flows to the ocean, its ultimate goal . . .

We are the tributaries and mainstream

We are the Senior School graduates

We endured doldrums,
Defied dams, ran rough rapids.
Now, ripe for far shores,
We'll meet tide and bore, make a
Maelstrom of shock waves—we'll roar!

Trumpeters Nathan Kerr and Mark Moore heralded over 60 guests through a Roman arch constructed by Jack Mannke, and the 1977 Latin Banquet was on. A large buffet table was spread; Mrs. Alice Teprovich and her helpers Mrs. MacGillis, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Mannke and Mrs. Rutkowski, served the guests. Tables were set with placemats picturing ancient Athens and Rome, and decorated with boughs of pine cut by Tom McCargo, apples supplied by Mollie Fitzgerald, and candles courtesy of David Bonnet. Several skits were put on by the 9th grade class. A parade of costumes was judged by the parents, and prizes awarded to Janice Teprovich and Timmy Volk. Prizes for games played before and after dinner went to: Tom Courtney, Mollie Fitzgerald, Jack Mannke, Tina Mucci and Bill Stevenson. As a finale, students and their parents joined in a game of Latin Bingo, conducted by Senior School guest Carol Hays.

Thanks to the knowledgeable planning of Mrs. Teprovich, a profit of $117.00 remained after all expenses were paid. This money, with a sum already in the Latin Club's account, was mailed in a check for $135.00 to Pompeiana, Incorporated, toward the building of the new National Museum of Classical Heritage in Indianapolis, Indiana.

We clear the decks

We are the travel and trade

The River, this year's theme, is of eminent importance to our village. Originally we were spawn of the city, carried north along its course. Then rails and roads lined its shores, and in 1911 the Sewickley Bridge spanned its width with lacy towers and trellised steel. Among tall maples we grew as the traffic on, along and over the Ohio increased, until our man-made avenues of communication assumed equal significance with the River's transport. Today that balance is threatened; rust and decay destroys our bridge. Without it we wither; we disintegrate; we die.

The wide water winds
Past plant, shop and factory,
Under urban spans,
Beneath suburban bridges
Rusting and wearing its way.

FAST!

If you're a little baffled by the complexities of selling your home yourself, contact us.

Real Estate Counselors offers you an easy-to-understand system at a surprisingly low price.

You get an informative homeselling kit, plus the services of a licensed real estate counselor who will advise you on every facet of homeselling and guide you every step of the way.

Since we charge a set fee—not a percentage of the selling price of your house—you save substantially more than you would with the traditional realtor arrangement.

So get professional counseling at the lowest possible price. Call today... 367-0221.

Allegheny Ludlum Industries: a group of our companies is helping people keep in touch.

We go to great lengths in communications. A few seconds' dialing gets your party quickly and clearly, with the help of magnetic materials from Arnold Engineering. High in the sky, the Comsat satellite contains vacuum-melted super alloys from our Special Metals Corporation. Quick transfer of information is yours, too, in data processing, aided by our Allegheny Ludlum Steel. Used in radios, TV and other communications equipment, our electrical alloys also go into computers, electric typewriters, teletype machines.

In the world of communications, as in other growth markets, we have a touch worth noting.

Allegheny Ludlum Industries, Inc., Oliver Bldg., Pittsburgh, Pa. 15222. Our other key industries: Jacobsen, True Temper, IPM, Carmet, Wallingford.

Looking upstream

For the first time the Academy's schedule included an August start and a June 16th dismissal to make possible the long, energy-saving, Christmas vacation—until January 16th. Windows were plastic covered, and on the windward side storm sash were installed. Under the west wing roof of 'Old Main', insulation cut heat loss, as did the interior vestibules built at the principal entrances. These innovations helped because the winter of 1978 was frigid and blustery.

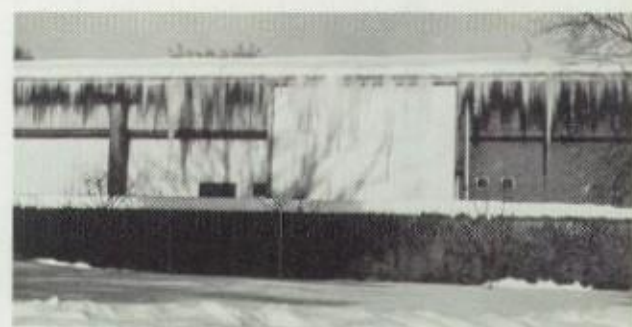

The prolonged United Mine Workers' strike, that started in December, caused energy shortages and necessitated twenty-five percent electrical cut-backs by large scale consumers. Oil lamps and kerosene disappeared from store shelves, as people prepared for possible blackouts. Garbage, the alleged growing source of fuel, was no help here; it was not even collected, just snowed in and under. But twenty-plus-plus inches locally created a skier's paradise.

Other parts of the country also suffered from the elements and environs. In September Kansas City was devastated by a flood; in October Hawaii's Kilauea volcano erupted. Drought-ridden California first experienced damaging fires, then torrential rains, which caused mud slides that buried a town. Beginning in early January, Arctic temperatures and winds drove deep into mid-United States, disrupting life from Minnesota to Florida. In the northeast, record snow falls inundated wide spread areas, and angry seas lashed the coast. Blizzards in New England were the worst in nearly a century. The "layered look" became not only a style, but a necessity.

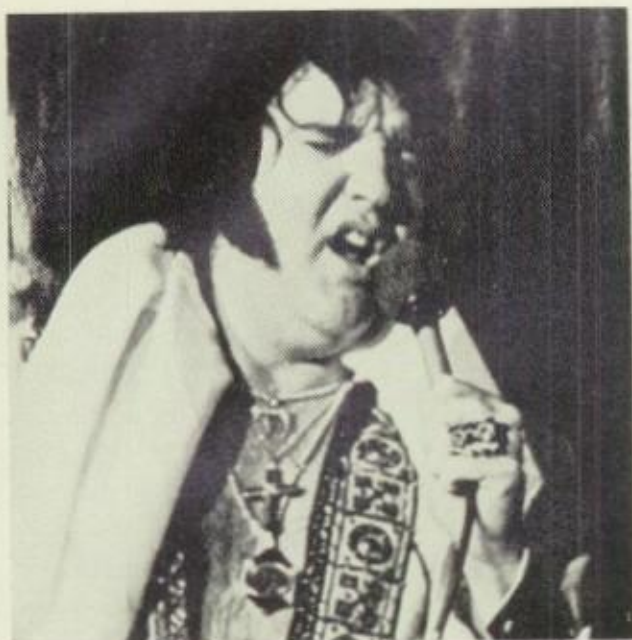

While we upholstered ourselves with down jackets, sheep skin, and ski masks to shed the cold, Yves Saint Laurent, in a crowded, Paris showroom, introduced smart spring and summer costumes that revealed the feminine form in peekaboo ruffled chiffon, strapless evening gowns and knee-length frocks. Anyone interested in a $7500.00 outfit?

The world was a problem place this past year. At summer's end there was a cholera epidemic—thousands of cases in the Middle East. China and the United States agreed to disagree on Taiwan. War still simmered in Southeast Asia, and refugees sought escape in small fishing boats. The national unity of Canada was threatened by differences between the French and English provinces. In spite of Egyptian President Sadat's peace efforts, the conflict continued between Arabs and Jews over Israeli war-won territory and disputed settlements. Racial disturbances were suppressed in South Africa, where Prime Minister John Vorster's Nationalists won the December election. In Rhodesia Ian Smith and moderate blacks agreed to a black majority government, but terrorists pressed their attacks. Cuban involvement escalated in other African countries and in the military operations of Ethiopia against Somalia.

There were varied troubles in the United States also. Inflation endured. Increased property taxes and land/building costs brought protests from present and prospective home owners. In December thousands of women attended the ERA conference in Houston. Rumors of tax-subsidy and critical reports of this meeting probably swelled the sharp controversy over homosexuality and abortion that still rages. Unhappy farmers, threatening to strike for higher price supports, took their complaint to Washington via a long caravan of tractors. Discovery of bribery, forgery, fraud and racketeering ended many political careers. While President Carter and the Congress talked of lowering taxes, a much higher assessment had to be levied to rescue the Social Security System from bankruptcy. Meanwhile, many senior citizens were demanding the right to work after age sixty-five. To curb vandalism, fewer windows were installed in modern buildings; now this construction defeated hopes of saving electricity. Unsolved murders caused an increase in gun sales, but more cautious citizens depended on watch dogs. In January Senator Hubert Humphrey succumbed to cancer. "The Happy Warrior" was eulogized by both political friends and foes.

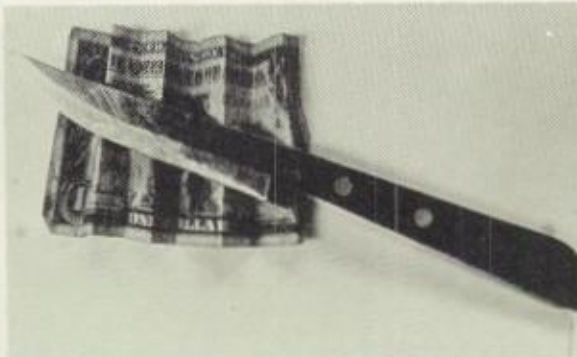

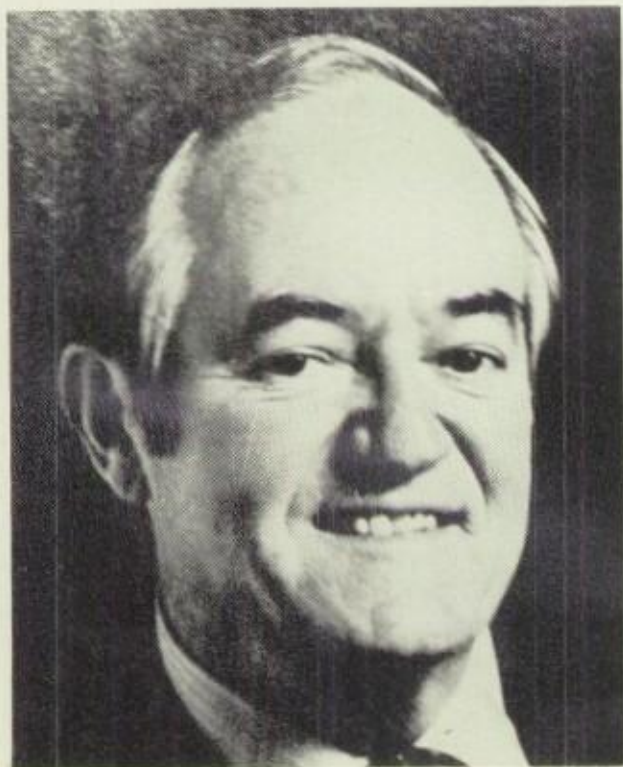

The entertainment world also lost many important performers. In August popular singer Elvis Presley died suddenly at the age of forty-two, and Ethel Waters, after a long acting career, died at seventy-seven. Then opera singer, Maria Callas, and conductor Leopold Stokowski died in September. A month later well-loved, singer/entertainer Bing Crosby suffered a fatal heart attack. New Year's Eve was not quite the same for the 'Royal Canadians' and the American TV audience without Guy Lombardo. In April Radio City Music Hall closed for good—an end of the "Rockette Era".

Educational institutions faced many difficulties this year: lowered educational standards, poor SAT scores, ballooning costs, college student loans in default, and such particular protests as the reverse discrimination case of Allan Bakke and dissent over the gymnasium site selected by Kent University. Although we are not self-satisfied at the Academy, we do feel fully justified in following traditional teaching when we observe the present "back to basics" movement in other schools. Our new, faculty Curriculum Committee is re-evaluating and will soon publish our courses of study, Kindergarten through Twelfth Grade.

We know that all is not gabble and gloom. This year NASA selected six women, three black men and one Japanese American as astronauts. When the Nobel prizes were awarded in October, of the seven prizewinners in the sciences, five were again Americans. The World Health Organization announced that the killer strain of smallpox had been eradicated from the globe. There was great popularity of physical fitness programs, and past-lives therapy became a fascinating fad. However, doctors proved hypnosis helpful to many patients.

We enjoyed such best sellers as: The Silmarillion, All Things Wise and Wonderful, The Thorn Birds, Your Erroneous Zones, and Looking Out For #1. The BBC's thirteen-part production of I, Claudius achieved the excellence of previous English films on Channel 13. Spielberg's thriller about UFO's, Close Encounters of the Third Kind, was ambitious and affecting. Both book and film were popular with students.

We watched the Yankees take the World Series from the Los Angeles Dodgers, and the Dallas Cowboys win Superbowl XII in a one-sided game with the Denver Broncos at the Superdome in New Orleans. After fifteen rounds Muhammad Ali lost the World's Heavyweight Championship by a split decision to Leon Spinks.

By the time this book went to press in March, most of us had suffered at home for a week with Russian flu, swallowing aspirin and swilling orange juice, while the TV chattered about the Panama Canal treaties; nuclear contamination, at Grek Slave Lake in northern Canada, from the residue of a crashed, Soviet spy satellite; thirteen Russian spys deported by Canada; the declining stock market; the sick dollar; Carter's proposed crackdown on the "three martini lunch"; and Hard Times on Channel 13. No wonder television viewing decreased this year for the first time in history!

But spring and summer, buds and baseball, vacation and variation are on the way! Cheers!

A city rifts the
Sky to see the mountain tops,
To shine yellow-lighted
Eyes through river fog, making
Mini-rainbows of the mist.
